We've read and been told that wholesale prices for beef cannot go much above $1.05 a cwt. in the Midwest before expiring price resistance at the retail level. It's clear that consumers will pay only so much for beef. We've visited with you that our local supermarket has had more beef cuts marked down recently than we've ever seen before. Apparently, the consumer price cap is in play and retailers are doing their best to move beef.

We attended Brashman Clinic VII put on by John Joyce at Houston, Texas, late last month. Ed Price of Safeway Stores reported that labor accounts for two-thirds of the cost of his company doing business.

Another speaker at the Texas clinic, W.H. "Buckshot" Price, executive vice-president of the Texas Restaurant Assn., said labor costs in his industry are comparable to supermarket costs.

Buckshot said that while Texas has its share of restaurant food chains, the bulk of his association's membership is made up of individual operators. What has given these individuals some cushion in their operating costs has been the opportunity to sell liquor by the drink during the past four years.

At the head of the beef trail, top industry sources have told us, is the retail customer. Our industry is finally realizing this. John Houston, executive vice-president of the Live Stock and Meat Board, said the Beef Industry Council has selected a San Francisco advertising agency, Boston Ketchum, to coordinate an effective state and national beef promotion program for the 28 state beef councils.

Houston told the clinic audience that the San Francisco agency has a proven record. The agency currently handles the Potomac Board's superb national program as well as much of the advertising for Safeway Stores.

The cattle industry is moving ahead on all fronts—including producing the kind of beef super nutrition-conscious consumers are demanding. It was clear to those of us attending Clinic VII that there is definitely room for more cooperation between the various elements of the industry, from producers like yourselves to the final retailer. We'll have more information from this informative clinic in our November issue of Livestock Journal, which will feature the Brashman breed.

FRONTIER LIFE—Frederic G. Renner has spent his life collecting and researching the works of Charles Marion Russell, the Western artist famed for portrayals of frontier life which blend documentation, romanticism and insight to a vanishing culture. This watercolor entitled "When I Was A Kid (1906)" is just one of Renner's 100 piece collection presented to the public for the first time. Organized by the Phoenix Art Museum, the exhibition will travel to the C.M. Russell Museum, Great Falls, Mont., and will finish its tour at the Denver Art Museum, Oct. 3 through Dec. 6.

Dextrose in bacon can curb nitrosamine level

By degrading ordinary table sugar to dextrose and using it in the dry-cure process of bacon, a University of Missouri-Columbia food scientist has arrived at a way to prevent the formation of nitrosamines in dry-cured bacon.

Dr. Milton Bailey, who has been researching the use of dextrose in the bacon dry-cure process for the last three years, said, the dry-cure process, as well as the pump process, imparts sodium nitrite, salt and sugar. "By reducing sugar to a secondary amine [dextrose]," Bailey said, "We have the appropriate group of ingredients that will react well with sodium nitrite."

Bailey said that sodium nitrite is not the problem; it is essential in the dry-cure and pump processes because it prevents botulism and enhances bacon's flavor and color.

Nitrosamines, which have been found to be carcinogenic, form when sodium nitrite is combined with sucrose, he said.

"Dextrose is a secondary amine, which sucrose is not. Dextrose prevents the formation of nitrosamines."

WLJ tour explores Southwest ranches

By LEE PITTS
Judge Roy Bean was the law here. Billy the Kid blazed his way to infamy here and Smokey the Bear was found here in this land where the West still lives. Western Livestock Journal's fall Southwest Ranch Tour promises to be a most enjoyable trip for the over 120 stockmen and their wives from 12 states who have already signed up.

The tour will originate in El Paso, Texas. Early arrivals will have the opportunity to visit Juarez, Mexico, where they can sample Mexican cuisine at its finest. In Juarez and El Paso, shoppers can purchase top quality boots and Western wear right from the factory in this center of the Western wear manufacturing industry.

Aside from the informative and leisurely ranch visits, the six day journey will be filled with many enjoyable activities.

The land around Carlsbad, N.M., is harsh and rugged with temperatures extreme and rainfalls fierce. But below ground in huge galleries lavishly decorated

Jarboe-Lackey file motion for dismissal

Jarboe-Lackey Feedlot, Inc., Parsons, Kan., has filed a motion with the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals for dismissal of the U.S. government's appeal of a U.S. district court judge's decision regarding diethylstilbestrol-implemented beef, Ann Baker, assistant attorney for Jarboe-Lackey told CNS.

On May 7 District Court Judge Patrick Kelly dismissed the government's case, which alleged that 170,000 lb. of beef illegally implanted with DES was adulterated and should be destroyed. The cattle were implanted with DES after the Oct. 31, 1979, Food and Drug Administration deadline.

Jarboe-Lackey filed the motion on the grounds that the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction over the case because the District Court did not reach a final decision on the case May 7, Baker said. The District Court raised the issue regarding the awarding of damages to the defendant at the close of the 60-page decision. Jarboe-Lackey contends that until a decision is made on the awarding of damages by the District Court, the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction, Baker said.

A panel of three judges is expected to rule on the motion to dismiss within six to eight weeks, an Appellate Court spokeswoman said.

If the judges deny the request, a trial will be scheduled, Baker said. If the request is granted, the District Court will have to rule on the question of damages, she said.

The government filed a response to the motion to dismiss on Aug. 21, the court spokeswoman said, stating that the District Court had disposed of all issues before it. The government response also contended that the government was immune to the charges, she said.

Beef Council ups budget for multi-million ad campaign

The Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board approved $8.5 million increase in the Meat Board's 1981-82 beef budget at the organization's recent annual meeting in Minneapolis.

The increase, which brings the Meat Board's total beef budget to $6.3 million, was made possible by increases in state beef check-off programs and in the amount invested by the states in the national effort.

The BIC allocated approximately $4.5 million for advertising and promotion efforts—the largest such budget in beef promotion history.

Almost all of the $4.5 million will be put toward initiation of the beef industry's planned $7.9 million advertising and promotion campaign slated for 1982 in the nation's 10 largest cities.

This campaign, which was put together by the industry with the help of the market consulting firm Macgregor Horizons, Inc., will feature television, radio, magazine and billboard advertising, along with extensive retailer tie-in and consumer awareness studies to measure effectiveness.

To help coordinate the campaign nationally, the state beef councils and the BIC of the Meat Board have begun a search for a common beef industry advertising agency. The agency will be selected from a list of eight contenders in late August or early September.

"In the past 18 months the beef industry has seen the forging of a strong federation between the state beef councils and the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board," said Hilmar G. Moore of Richmond, Texas, newly elected chairman of the BIC.

"This beef promotion federation represents a strong commitment on the part of the industry to aggressive, long-term market development programs for beef."

The BIC allocated $600,000 to implement a fall promotion and advertising campaign in six markets: Minneapolis/St. Paul, Dallas/Ft. Worth, Cleveland, Sacramento, Denver, and San Diego. The campaign, based on the theme "Make Ends Meet, with the Great Taste of Beef," will feature 30-second television commercials and extensive retailer tie-in materials, distributed by the state beef councils.

"This effort comes at a time when the beef industry is looking for new ways to return to profitability," said Robert Josseland, chairman of the BIC Promotion Committee. "We think this campaign will remind consumers of the good value and good taste of beef."

Advertising will be conducted on three different levels—threshold, mid-level and high-level—in order to evaluate the effect each level has on beef sales. This measurement will help the industry in planning future campaigns.

The remainder of the beef budget will be allocated for other promotional efforts, including the National Beef Cook-Off (co-sponsored by the BIC and the American National CowBelles), and Meat Board programs of nutrition research, education, communications, retail aren't taken to prevent the problem. Not just single animals, but herds, boars, sows and gilts should be treated to improve performance and prevent transmission to pigs. Boars, sows and gilts should be dewormed prior to breeding and farrowing to help prevent exposure to young pigs. One-day treatments of new continuous deworming programs for sows and gilts should be used before farrowing to keep sows and gilts in the farrowing house free of parasites and unable to transmit parasites.

Swine do not develop immunity against worms. Preventive measures against worms include: timely use of broad spectrum wormers; strict sanitation; balanced nutrition; and avoidance of dirt lots which could harbor many worm eggs.

Because worms survive for months and years in pastures, lots, farmwings, houses and gossition facilities, it is important to make judicious use of worming compounds to decrease losses associated with internal parasites.

Most of us listen to others' troubles just for a chance to tell our own.

Market hits updraft amid tight supplies

FED CATTLE ENTERED THE week showing some mild price strength following last week's closing higher whole sale beef trade. The firmness was only short lived and live prices came under pressure following the opening session as carlot beef trade worked lower under light trade and demand. A continuing liberal federally inspected slaughter caused further bearishness in live cattle trade. However, midweek developments and restrictions on imported beef apparently stimulated late week trade. The Australian beef importment lifted the live cattle futures market out of the doldrums of a $64-66 trading range that had persisted for the last 3 weeks. Still the best demand centers on choice steers over 1100 lb. and heifers over 950 lb. with lighter weights experiencing more pressure with fewer outlets. Feeder buyers turned cautious this week and not as aggressive and competitive for good to low-choice steers and heifers to return to feedlots.

Midwestern terminal markets closed steady to $2 lower, with most of the decline on steers under 1125 lb. and heifers under 950 lb. Terminal markets western finished steady to $0.50 lower, except in Texas where steers and heifers finished steady to $0.50 higher.

Texhoma under new ownership

The Texhoma Livestock Commission Co., Inc., has announced that its livestock auction has changed ownership. According to office manager Bobbie Anderson, the six new stockholders are: Steve Hodges, Warren Owon, Armon Lundorback, T.H. Sossanum, Larry Noland and Julian Barry. The owners are all businessmen from Hereford, Texas. A grand opening is scheduled in conjunction with the company's annual Stocker Feeder Show and Sale, Sept. 24. The event will feature a free barbecue and bond. Prizes will be awarded to the top calves and steer and heifer feeders, says Anderson who predicts a large turnout. Consignments for that show/sale are now being taken. For more information, phone 405/423-7511.
